ESTIMATE 25 WORKMEN KILLED AND SCORE HURT IN EXPLOSION AT CEMENT PLANT NEAR EASTON

Terrific Explosion is Felt Over A 50-Mile Radius This Morning

SHOCK IS FELT HERE

Blast Was Premature and Damaged Building For Miles Around

By International News Service

EASTON, Pa., Mar 26—An estimated 25 workmen were killed and more than a score of persons, including 12 school children, were injured today by a terrific explosion at the Lehigh-Portland Cement Company's plant at Sandts Eddy, four miles north of Easton.

The detonation, result of a premature explosion in a cement-rock quarry on the plant's grounds, was of such terrific intensity that it was heard and felt over a radius of more than 50 miles.

Easton and scores of surrounding communities went through the pangs and fears of an earthquake as the explosions loosed tremors that shook buildings, hurled crockery from shelves and shattered windows.

Those killed, according to S. Chester Fazio, superintendent of Easton Hospital were blown to bits by the blast which, according to reports, let 15 tons of dynamite go. The hospital and other nearby institutions sent ambulances and first aid crews to the scene, but there was little for them to do as all in the quarry reportedly were beyond medical aid.

Leonard Sabatine, owner of the Sabatine Coal Company, located across Route 611 from the cement company, visited the scene and reported:

"It was a terrible sight. Dead bodies were strewn all around the place. The workmen were loading a big hole when she accidentally went off.

"There must have been 15 tons of powder in the blast. Everybody on the top of the quarry was killed. Those down under escaped.

"There wasn't anything anybody could do. The bodies—I presume about 25—were just left lying where the blast hurled them until the coroner arrived."

A spokesman for the Lehigh-Portland plant said no one in the buildings of the company was injured and it would be some time before the dead could be counted and identified.

The 12 injured children were hurled from their seats in the classroom of the Martin's Creek public school. None was seriously injured, doctors reported.

For more than an hour after the explosion, startled residents of the area

Bensalem Twp. Wardens Witness Timely Films

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Mar. 26—The air raid wardens of Bensalem Township witnessed a program of motion pictures last evening, which are most timely in the program of defense.

The session was held in the auditorium of Bensalem Township high school, with Elmer Vansant leading group singing of "America." '

The films shown included: "Fighting the Fire Bomb;" one film showing the British Commandos; another depicting British anti-aircraft guns in action; another of fighting of fires during an air raid on London, etc.

A Mr. Ross, of Doylestown, addressed the group, urging all to participate in purchase of defense stamps and bonds.

The township supervisors have had sand placed at strategic spots in the township, and ask that residents inquire of their air raid wardens where to secure a supply. The sand must be thoroughly dried, and should then be placed in a convenient place on the upper floor of the home.

A large group was present for the meeting.

A War Correspondent With The A.E.F.

By Robert G. Nixon
(I. N. S. War Correspondent)

WITH THE A. E. F., SOMEWHERE AT SEA, Mar. 26—(INS)—Traveling to war in a wartime convoy is an eerie, spine-tingling experience that has no counterpart in the luxurious, safe days of peace.

The ships are completely blacked out. They sail through the black, storm-ridden ocean like wraiths compacted from the salty mists of the wind-whipped waves.

Portholes are sealed. Smoking on deck is strictly forbidden. Even the faint glow of a cigarette might spell swift destruction to precious ships crowded with fighting men and materials of war. No one is permitted on deck at night except the working crew and soldier guards. All interior ship lights are doused at 10 p. m.

Ventilation is bad and you toss and sweat through the nights.

You must sleep fully dressed, for torpedoes give little time in which to leave a ship. You must wear your lifebelt constantly during the day, and at night it is by your side.

You are forbidden to take any baths, for water is precious and must be conserved. If you're lucky you can get an occasional damp rubdown, and that's all.

In a ship normally carrying 400 passengers, more than that number of troops will be packed aboard in every available space. They sleep in tiered bunks, separated by a bare two feet of space.

The nights are the worst. During the day you can stand on the decks, swathed to your ears against the biting cold and knife-like wind, and at least get some fresh air.

The food, however, is good and plentiful and meals are served in continuous rotation in order to take care of the abnormal conditions of crowding.

Despite these inconveniences, in fact by their very presence and the

LATEST WAR BULLETINS

Churchill Says Allies Can Win

.....London — The "combined and overwhelming strength" of the United Nations can turn the tide of war if all concerned will make the necessary sacrifices, Prime Minister Churchill said today in a sombre recital of Britain's military setbacks throughout the world.

Detailing all the defeats in the Far East and elsewhere and revealing that even the battle of the Atlantic has "grown worse again," Churchill appealed for unaimity and lashed out at propagandists seeking to undermine morale of the army.

The Prime Minister spoke to the National Union of Consevative Associations. He was given a rousing welcome, belying a whispeing campaign to the effect that his official Conservative backers wee falling away from nim.

Referring to Japanese attacks on British Far Eastern possessions "which our bitter needs in the West forced us to leave so insufficiently guarded," Churchill emphasized the possibility of further shocks.

"I am not here to speak smooth words or make cheering promises," he said.

Jap Bombers Pound Corregidor

Washington—For the third consecutive day Japanese bombers today unleashed their fury on Corregidor—fifty four heavy bombers participating in the assault—but the blazing guns of General Jonathan M. Wainwright's forces turned back the attack with heavy anti-aircraft fire that cost the enemy four planes.

Announcement was made by the War Deparrtment in a communique which stated that the latest raid lasted for six hours.

The planes shot down boosted to at least seven the number of Jap aircraft destroyed since heavy raids were renewed by the enemy three days ago in an obvious attempt to silence the powerful defending batteries.

MacArthur Addresses Australian Parliament

Canberra—With a firm promise of "ultimate victory," General Douglas MacArthur told the Australian Parliament and the world today that the United Nations will fight through to triumph without a shadow of compromise "or die."

Addressing a state dinner, MacArthur described himself as a crusader for liberty, speaking with the "unbreakable faith of a free man."

Prime Minister John Curtin told the dinner that the war will be conducted with "dynamic energy and inflexible purpose," but said the proceedings of the United Nations War Council must be kept secret.

Russians Pounding Nazi Forces

Moscow—Russian troops, continuing their pounding of Nazi forces to break up Hitler's plans for a Spring offensive, have struck hard blows against the enemy in the vicinity of Taganrog in the south and on the Kalinin front, where 11,000 Nazi soldiers were killed, Red army advices said today.

The Soviet high command said the 11,000 Germans had been "destroyed" in heavy fighting during a 10-day period ending March 21st in the Kalinin sector northwest of Moscow.

Soviet forces deep in the Donetz Basin were reported to be continually harrassing the German garrison at Taganrog, strategic Sea of Azov seaport.

MRS. JOE CITIZEN HAS GONE TO WAR - - -

By Walter Kiernan
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Mar. 26—(INS)—Mrs. Joe Citizen has gone to war in a faded housedress.

A little too squeamish to carry a gun, a little too old to work in a factory, a little too-plump to dash around in a fancy uniform, Mrs. Joe Citizen has gone to war within her own home.

Dawn to dusk she is on the line behind the firing line today.

She is lugging her packages from the store to save the grocer's gas, oil and tires and her own.

She is saving every newspaper and every shred of wrapping paper that comes into the house.

She is removing both ends of every can, flattening the can and putting it aside with the covers for the collector.

She is buying just enough sugar for the family coffee or tea and finding substitutes for other sweetening purposes.

She is watching her diet and that of the family to keep everybody on the beam physically.

She is tuning in the market reports and reading them in the papers to find out what is plentiful in foodstuffs.

She is darning and patching small boy clothing that she would ordinarily start toward the rag bag.

She is saving her few pairs of nylon and silk hosiery exclusively for dress up occasions.

She is saving tooth paste and cold cream tubes and Joe's squeezed out shaving cream tubes.

She is saving even broken glass since she learned that new glass is 40 per cent broken glass.

She is keeping the houses comfortably heated but not overheated to save fuel.

She is leaving the running of the war to the men trained in that field.

She does not expect to get her name or picture in the papers.

She does not expect any medals, any honors, any recognition for what she is doing.

She is Mrs. Joe Citizen.

She is Miss Liberty with a torch in her heart as well as in her hand.

She is Mrs. America.

START DRILLING FOR ARTESIAN WATER FOR BOROUGH USE

Experimental Test Well Being Driven On Land Recently Acquired

BIG FLOW IS EXPECTED

Delaware River Water No Longer Satisfactory Because of Taste and Odor

An experimental test well, as a possible source of water supply, is being drilled for Bristol Borough on land recently acquired by the Borough. The site is west of the P. R. R. elevated railroad and adjoins the Asay farm, near Silver Lake.

The drilling of the well started Monday and the work will continue until it has been definitely determined whether or not there is a sufficient supply of artesian water to meet the Borough's requirements.

Some water has been found but of course a sufficient depth has not as yet been reached to assure an adequate quantity.

The Water Committee of Bristol Borough Council on December 8th announced that approximately 55 acres of land had been purchased and that engineers had given it as their opinion that sufficient water might be obtained.

The land was formerly owned by Peter E. Costello & Sons, Inc., contractors, who installed the Bristol sewer system.

At the time that announcement of the purchase was made, it was stated that for several years the water in the Delaware River had developed a taste and odor which resisted all efforts of control, despite the fact that some of the best chemical and sanitary engineers in the country had been working toward this end.

Previous to the purchase of the ground, several tests for artesian wells as a source of supply were made within a radius of five miles of Bristol. Water taken from the ground where the experimental well is now being driven and also from points in Edgely were analyzed and the water from the ground acquired proved to be the better.

A report made by William H. Boardman, consulting engineers, stated that the proposed source of supply was of a strata which furnishes water in copious quantities.

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN
(I. N. S. Staff Writer)

We had months, years, to prepare our plans and there still is opportunity for exorbitant profits in war. Isn't that ducky?

We had it all doped out after the last war. "Never again," we said. "No more war profiteers."

It sounded all right on paper. But we threw away the paper.

We could have frozen war profits to six, ten or even twenty per cent before we got into this shindig. But we didn't. And we aren't doing it now.

We could have frozen war wages at a ceiling to correspond with the cost of living. But we didn't. And we aren't doing it now.

We could have taken the profit out of war. But we didn't. And we aren't doing it now.

But somebody will write a book about it after this war. The title probably will be "No More War Profiteers." It will have a wide sale and then be forgotten.

ECONOMY SPEED

The President's request to governors for co-operation in reducing automobile speeds to forty miles an hour is based on a desire to save tires and gasoline. It will, however, waste time in transportation, particularly as it will slow down intercity and interstate bus schedules.

But as high speed is a contributing factor in fatal accidents, slowing down traffic might mean fewer accidents. Most governors have expressed sympathy with the President's request, but as speed limits are regulated by legislative action in most states it is not clear how a 40-mile limit can be established throughout the nation overnight.

Pennsylvania may go along. The President's message has been presented to a special session of the legislature by Governor James and the governor does not oppose the request. The speed limit in Pennsylvania is now 50 miles an hour, 70 miles an hour on the super toll highway connecting Harrisburg and Pittsburgh.

An unfortunate feature of the early months of this war is the manner in which it has affected the automobile industry and automobile transportation. Automobile factories have been forbidden to manufacture new cars, thus creating havoc with thousands of automobile dealers and their hundreds of thousands of employes. Manufacture and sale of tires has been forbidden because the Japs now have the rubber which once flowed to the United States, and gasoline is about to be rationed in seventeen Eastern states, Washington and Oregon due to shipping difficulties caused in large part by enemy submarines.

THE PEOPLE KNOW

Washington is evidently becoming a little sensitive about word from the country that it is regarded as holding up the war effort. The defenders of the Potomac front are putting out the word that they should not be judged by what has been happening among the "Now, children" experts over in Dean Landis' OCD playground.

They need have no fear about the people. The people know that Dean Landis is not the whole show, or even very much of it. They know that Congress is holding back the war effort by giving in to the labor and farm interests, that White House failure to delegate power with responsibility is largely responsible for Donald Nelson's statement, three months after Pearl Harbor, that production is only about 50 per cent of capacity, and that government pay rolls in Washington are loaded with thousands of parasites who should be sent back to private life or assigned to defense jobs.

The country has been patient with Washington. It has wanted Washington to throw off the inertia of practical politics and rise to the demands of war, when men have to do things and take a chance on paying the penalty for doing the wrong thing.

The country looks to Washington hopefully and prayerfully for inspiration and example. The people are highly critical not only because the Washington that is taking their sons and their jobs and their dimes is fooling away weeks over laws that could be put through in three days, and showing signs of fight only over which is the best way to waste non-defense money.

MATA HARI'S Daughter

By MAURICE DEKOBRA and LEYLA GEORGIE

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

For a half hour, the expert studied the notes. "It's code, sir," he said finally, "but a very complicated one. It's in German, I'm sure. But I can't get the key out of it at once. There's so little to work with—not more than five or six words."

"How long will it take?"

"Perhaps a day; perhaps longer."

"Drop everything else until you've solved it."

As the agent left, Sir John slumped in his chair.

"Well," he said bitterly addressing space, "MacDonald wins! It's heredity that tells the story. Maybe she's a true daughter of Mata Hari, after all!"

But he couldn't leave it at that. He began pacing the long room . . . Brinda! Little Brinda! Somehow, he couldn't believe it. Should he call her in and invite her to explain? No, that wouldn't do. If she were a spy—or if some clever Fifth Columnist was using her as one—it would merely give them warning.

What was it the housekeeper had said? "Staying out all hours." Then he remembered—that benefit ballet for evacuees. A decent enough cause. And perfectly respectable—Prince Vaslav was running it . . . Vaslav.

"I wonder"— He left the thought unfinished. But a little later, on reaching his office, he called in a confidential aide and asked for Prince Vaslav's file.

"We have none," said the aide, looking shocked. "Don't you know"—He whispered the rest.

"I'm aware of that," declared Sanderson crisply. "However, I'm not interested in his royal connections or in who vouched for him. I'm afraid there's been too much of that in this country—as well as across the Channel. If we've no file on this man, it's time we started one. I shall expect you to have better information when I ask again."

"Yes, sir," said the aide. "I shall, sir." His voice sounded as though he meant it.

* * * *

During weeks of rehearsal, Brinda seized every chance to become familiar with the mysteries of Vaslav's abode. It was not easy, because there seemed to be soft-footed servants everywhere. But she persisted.

Most of all she sought the door from which had come the buzzing sound—like that of a powerful wireless set.

Then came a night she was sure she had found it. It had been a long evening—a final drilling of principals sandwiched in between the dress rehearsal and the public performance. She heard the other leaving; Vaslav telling them goodnight.

For a moment the upper hallway was unoccupied. Her heart in her throat, Brinda crept along it until she came to the spot where the door should have been. But there was only a tapestried wall-hanging. She turned—and confronted Vaslav.

He looked at her smilingly, his black luminous eyes drinking in her slender loveliness.

"Ah," he said, softly, "you've discovered my little secret. Well . . . it was time." He touched the tapestry, and it slid aside, revealing a narrow grilled door. This, too, opened silently. "Will you please enter?" He bowed elaborately. Then, as Brinda hesitated, "Surely, you will not deny me the pleasure of satisfying your lovely curiosity, my beautiful ballerina?"

The challenge sufficed.

"I never guessed there was a lift," remarked Brinda, smiling.

"A tiny one," said Vaslav, "but large enough." He stepped in after her, and the little house elevator silently ascended. "My private retreat," said the Prince, opening the door. "You are more than welcome."

Brinda's glance swept the room. She saw the globe, the books, the spacious lounge. But there was no trace of any wireless. Then she realized the sound must have come from somewhere else in the building—some other room that also gave on the elevator shaft.

Under Vaslav's gaze, she became suddenly conscious of the completeness of their isolation from the outer world.

"Please sit down," he said. "No, one moment—just stand there—let me look at you."

Without warning, his arms were about here holding her in a grip of steel.

She beat on his chest with her fists, but, from his superior height, he looked down at her with a smile that was a strange mixture of tenderness and ferocity.

With one hand, he pinioned her wrists; with the other, he bent back her head. Deliberately, he kissed her on the lips. She twisted her face away, and his kisses fell hotly on her cheeks and throat.

Even while hatred for Vaslav surged through her, Brinda was conscious for the first time of fear—a dread doubt that she could not defend herself. His voice was deep, soothing, possessive.

"Darling! I love you! Do you understand? I worship you!"

For a swift instant, Brinda marveled that she could have been foolish enough to put herself in his power. She felt helpless, trapped, afraid . . . Afraid not only of Vaslav, but of the unfamiliar impulses that surged in her own being.

Unbidden, the thought came to her: What would Mata Hari do? And, instantly, she knew—as surely as though someone had whispered the words in her ear.

Steeling herself, she returned his kiss. She made her eyes languid, compelled herself to smile.

"You don't need to hold me," she whispered. "I shan't run away."

"You're sure?"

"Oh, yes, Vaslav—yes!"

Slowly, she relaxed his tight embrace. She slipped from his arms. Then, as he would have held her again, "Wait!" She twisted a displaced shoulder-strap into place. "You muss a girl terribly, don't you? Where did it go?"

She turned, pretending to scan the floor in search of something . . . Ah!—before Vaslav could divine her intention—she moved swiftly, purposefully. A bright object, thin and pointed, flashed in her hand. On the wall, an empty spot among Vaslav's trophies indicated the place whence the dagger had come.

Vaslav's face went hard and watchful.

"Clever!" he said, showing his teeth in a thin smile. "But unnecessary." He took a step towards her. "Besides" . . . another step . . . "I doubt that you would use it." One more step. "Will you?"

"I most emphatically shall!" Brinda clutched the hilt of the dagger tighter.

"Really? . . . I don't think so." He leaped.

Safety Discussed By Bell Employees

years or more without being responsible for an accident. Throughout the State nearly 800 Bell employees have qualified. Members of the club in this company district have driven more than 4,700,000 miles in all kinds of weather and with varied road conditions without being responsible for an accident.

Another feature of the rally was a first aid contest in which six teams participated. Each team was composed of five employees, one a "victim," the other four caring for the "victim" until "medical aid" was obtained. All Bell plant employees are trained in first-aid and many employees in other departments of the company have received this training.

Carl R. Freehafer, vice-president and general manager of the Bell Telephone Company, presented certificates of membership and gold-stamped wallets to the two new members. He also gave special awards to the other members who had extended their safety records. Mr. Freehafer spoke on the company's general accident prevention program.

Peter L. Schauble, vice-president, public relations, of the Bell Company, discussed the company's general safety policies and spoke of the importance of the participation of the entire employee body in these activities.

A brief address was made by Russell P. Long, general plant manager, and Richard E. Thomas, division plant superintendent, presented prizes to the winning and second teams in the first-aid contest. Roy L. Smith, district plant superintendent, presided at the rally.

Those present included: Thomas H. Griest, general commercial manager; Joseph B. Wittan, division manager; Henry B. Cowan, division construction superintendent; Alfred B. Hennessy, district manager; Roscoe H. Walls, district traffic superintendent; Frank J. Dilworth and William L. Davis, assistant district traffic superintendents; Charles F. Beatty, manager at Doylestown; Frank L. Houseman, manager at Norristown; Willard L. Kline, manager at Pottstown; William M. Taylor, manager at Lansdale, and G. Earl Tippin, manager at Jenkintown.

A motion picture, "Defense and the Telephone," showed how the Bell System is providing telephone service to the armed forces and to the "home front" of war industry.

When the 100,000 Mile Club was established in 1938, its charter members were men who already had been driving for ten years without being responsible for an accident. Charter members on the club's membership rolls in this district are:

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — There are men and there are men—those who notice what a lady is wearing and those who compliment her on her new hat when she's already been wearing it for six weeks.

But every man present noticed Barbara Stanwyck's formal number in chalk white crepe with its beaded motif of bright red strawberries forming a semi-girdle and falling down the front of the intricately draped skirt. Barbara says she has never been so enthused about any dress she's ever owned.

These strawberries were eye-catching to say the least and I've noticed before that it's such unusual accents as this that are always intriguing to "the opposite sex."

It should, then, be a pleasant season for the men because "motifs" are definitely in the limelight.

Barbara, who is the gayest of "The Gay Sisters," has also been wearing a blouse that is bound to be talked about. In cream silk, to blend with a darker cream wool suit, the blouse carries a design of yellow bananas in huge ripe bunches "hung over the front and back and over one long, full sleeve.

Whimsical Designs Are the Rage

Whimsical designs are all the rage too judging from a hostess robe Claudette Colbert wears in a future production. This is in the form of a musical cleft and notes embroidered on one shoulder.

Often enormous flowers point up the obvious simplicity of a frock and make it something out of the ordinary immediately. Ann Sheridan learned the potency of this fashion trick when she wore a dark green wool cocktail dress carrying two tulips in lighter and contrasted shades of green cut out of felt and embossed on the left shoulder. Three shades of blended green and slim, straight lines and Ann was getting compliments right and left.

Another obvious motif that has impressed us lately appeared on a gown belonging to Kaaren Verne. A large, delicate spider web and spider of black sequins was embroidered on the skirt of Kaaren's period gown of black taffeta.

Although it's a little early yet to speak of the very gay prints, here again their designs will be extremely imaginative. You can't go too far in these whether the design is very small or very large as they will be. The butterfly prints will probably be very popular at first but we don't expect them to carry on into summer as they are already too popular—at least in Hollywood where some of the smartest afternoon and evening dresses are embroidered or designed with small butterflies or huge fauna moths in wonderful colors.

WHEAT KING

YORK, Pa.—(INS)—Pennsylvania wheat growing honors for the second straight year went to a 23-year-old tenant farmer, Wilmer Leese, who farms with his grandfather, Valentine Nace, 68, two miles from Hanover. Young Leese won the title of "Wheat King" with a forward variety of soft red winter wheat, and an average production of 35 bushels per acre for his 40 acres.

Diary of:

constant danger that walks by your side, it becomes a great and exhilarating adventure. I never heard a soldier grumble or grouse on the long voyage across the Atlantic. They were an extraordinarily cheerful lot, ate tons of candy bars, whiled away the hours playing hearts when not attending ships drill or duty on the anti-aircraft and anti-submarine defenses, and wrote letters back home to Mom or their girls.

Alcohol is strictly forbidden on board U. S. naval vessels. Even beer is banned. This was no hardship on the troops, however. Drinking to most of these youngsters, I found, means cold soda pop or ice cream sodas, and they had their soda pop.

The days were enlivened by "Abandon Ship" drill. These were carried out swiftly, quietly and efficiently. Every person aboard is assigned a position in a boat, raft or motor gig.

In the personnel of this first contingent of the A. E. F., I found, are mainly units from Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Wisconsin—strangely enough the heart of the traditional isolationist midwest, but there was no spirit of isolationism evident in talking with these lads. They know a tough job has got to be done, and they are eager to get along with it.

There are selectees from scattered states and a small group of non-commissioned personnel from Texas, Louisiana, Georgia, Tennessee, and Florida. The officers are mainly from the middle west, but there are a few from Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Michigan, Florida, Kentucky and West Virginia. Many of them are from the reserve corps.

A group of nurses from Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania came with the medical detachment.

Few of the troops or nurses had ever been away from their home or immediately adjacent states until the war began. Few had ever seen the ocean. Some were seasick the first few days, but they soon got their sea legs and remained fit when our convoy ran into a severe mid-winter storm the last days of the voyage.

Tells How London Is Recovering From Bombs

more and more. I have not been in the great city since last September, and there are quite a few changes noticeable. One does not find, any more, those poor bombed-out creatures sleeping in the tubes on iron bunks, steps and cold concrete as they did before. Everywhere is bomb wreckage being cleared up.

"On top of the debris that was the unfortunate gate to parts of the town are growing up new edifices, speaking more strongly than words, the strength of the 'chicken neck' which Hitler once claimed to have wrung. They are new and better structures, these great walls that I see on every hand being erected.

"Somehow it seems to me to be tangible evidence of a people once so long asleep awakening to the new ages. Oh, the Englishman still sips his tea and takes good and bad news quietly, but we can sense from newspapers, radios, etc., the rising strength of the men of action."

rushed to telephones to learn the cause, many to confirm when they "knew."—That it was an earthquake. The volume of telephone calls tied up all trunk lines into Easton for more than 30 minutes.

The cement company is located on Route 611, which runs parallel to the Delaware River.

Although there was no evidence to support any theory of sabotage, State Police and FBI agents were expected to conduct a thorough investigation. The cause of the premature explosion, however, may never be learned since all in the immediate area are dead.

In the explosion, a tremendous column of grayish white smoke shot high in to the sky. Mixed with the smoke were tons of rock and the bodies of the victims.

The force of the concussion was terrific, not only in the vicinity of the city of Easton, but throughout the Lehigh Valley section. Thousands of persons were terrified and some panic-stricken by the blasts which smashed plate glass windows miles away. As far distant as Doylestown, approximately 50 miles from the scene, dishes rattled in cupboards and pictures shook on walls of stone residences.

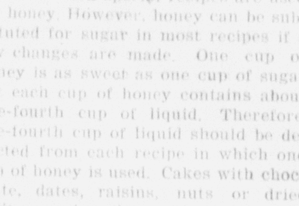
State Police Private Schafer, one of the first to reach the scene, reported to his headquarters at Easton that 25 bodies had been counted.

The shock was felt in Bristol and the Courier received a number of calls inquiring as to the cause.

Penny Wise says...

"Buckle down—to work for Uncle Sam"

BEFORE washing a garment, remove breakable buttons and buckles. Pearl buttons or jeweled buckles haven't the stamina to face washing machines or hard scrubbing. Broken or missing buttons can ruin a costume, or, if unmatchable, necessitate the purchase of a new set.



Then put the money saved into DEFENSE SAVINGS STAMPS—to help button up Hitler! Every pay check should be budgeted to include generous help for Uncle Sam.

HONEY IS A NATURAL SWEET THAT CAN BE USED AS SWEETENER

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

Honey as a Food—Honey is a natural sweet that can be used in baking, candy making, preservation of foods, as a sweetening for sauces or any place where cane sugar might be used. Its chief advantage over sugar is the fact that it is more quickly absorbed and digested in the body. Honey has slight laxative powers. The minerals in honey are in such minute quantities that their importance in the diet cannot be considered.

Honey in Baking—Best results are obtained when special recipes are used for honey. However, honey can be substituted for sugar in most recipes if a few changes are made. One cup of honey is as sweet as one cup of sugar but each cup of honey contains about one-fourth cup of liquid. Therefore, one-fourth cup of liquid should be deducted from each recipe in which one cup of honey is used. Cakes with chocolate, dates, raisins, nuts or dried fruits require the same amount of liquid when honey is used as when granulated sugar is used. This is because these added ingredients absorb moisture. To counteract the acidity of honey, one-fourth to one-half teaspoon of soda should be used in addition to baking powder in all baking recipes. A lower temperature than ordinarily used for baking should be used because honey caramelizes quickly. Products made with honey stay moist longer than those made with sugar.

Other Uses of Honey—Honey can be used as part or all the sugar in canning fruit, making jellies or jams or as sweetening in sauces, for fresh fruit or cereal, spreads on bread, or in frostings or candy.

Honey Syrup for Canning Fruits—Bring water to the boiling point. Add honey and stir. Again let come to a good rolling boil. Remove all scum. Honey syrup tends to darken peaches and pears but does intensify the original fruit flavor.

Honey in Jams and Jellies—To each cup of fruit juice add ¾ cup of honey. Cook rapidly to usual jelly consistency. Remove scum. Pour into hot glasses.

To Measure Honey—To measure honey, dip the spoon or cup in water or use a spoon or cup in which fat has first been measured.

Honey Sponge Cake

1 cup flour
½ cup sugar
¾ tsp. cream of tartar
½ tsp. salt
½ cup honey
5 egg yolks
5 egg whites
½ tsp. vanilla
2 tbsp. boiling water

Sift and measure flour and sugar. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add sugar and beat well, add honey and combine lightly. Add boiling water, a tablespoon at a time. Beat one-half minute, add flavoring, flour, and lastly fold in beaten egg whites. Pour into a tube pan and bake for 50 minutes in a very moderate oven (300 degrees). Then when baked, invert on a cake cooler, and allow to cool before removing from pan.

Boiled Honey Frosting

1½ cups honey
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 egg white
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cook honey and salt to 238 degrees F. or until it will spin a thread or make a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Beat egg white. Pour the syrup in a thin stream over the beaten egg white continuing to beat until all syrup is added and frosting will stand in peaks. Add vanilla and spread on cake.

Uncooked Honey Frosting

⅛ teaspoon salt
1 egg white
1 cup honey
½ teaspoon flavoring

Add salt to egg white. Warm honey slightly so it will pour in a thin stream. Pour in a thin stream over egg white while beating vigorously. Continue to beat until honey is used and frosting is stiff. Add flavoring and spread on cake.

(By the Rev. James R. Gailey)
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

Almighty God, hear us as we pray, "Thy Kingdom Come." Grant that it shall not be an empty prayer —words spoken from habit or from a sense of obligation. Grant rather that as we utter these words it shall be with a spirit of consecration in our hearts ,that as we pray for the coming of Thy Kingdom, so shall we devote our lives to the final answering of that prayer which has ascended before Thy throne throughout all the years of the Christian Church. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Bringing to the screen the type of comedy they have popularized on the radio for many years and which has gained for them a combined weekly listening audience of more than sixty-five million fans, Fibber McGee and Molly, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy unite their laugh-making talents with those of screen star Lucille Ball in "Look Who's Laughing," lavish comedy now at the Grand.

Most of the amusing action transpires in the mid-western town of Wistful Vista where the kindly but blundering McGee is president of the Chamber of Commerce. Bergen, playing a famous radio ventriloquist, and his little "protege," Charlie McCarthy, land there when their private plane runs out of gas.

RITZ THEATRE

Rosalind Russell and Walter Pidgeon are effectively teamed in "Design for Scandal," comedy of a lady judge who slips romantically, with the result that she is almost unseated from the bench. The new picture opened yesterday at the Ritz Theatre.

Molly Lamont is recognized as one of the finest athletes acting on the screen today, being an expert swimmer, tennis and golf player. She is currently appearing opposite William Gargan in "Fury and the Woman," at the Ritz Theatre.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"No Greater Sin," the daring social film about a doctor's fight to overcome venereal disease and the conditions contributing to its spread in a defense boom town, is at the Bristol Theatre today. "No Greater Sin" hangs up a record for script writing. Pictures often take as long as two years to produce but Edward A. Golden, producer, engaged a total of seven writers who worked on the story alone for two years.

With Hollywood writers grinding out hundreds of stories a year,—why should this one take so long?

PLEXIGLAS TEAM IS LOSER IN GAME WITH MACHINE SHOP

Main Office Force Bows To Plexiglas Team by Score of 28 to 17

GALLAGHER IS STAR

Boscul Rice Scores Six Field Goals and A Foul

Rebounding from its defeat of Tuesday night, the Machine Shop team captured a close decision from the Plexiglas Office quintet, 27-24, last night in one of the Rohm and Haas round-robin tilts. In the other game played, the Main Office bowed to the Plexigum team, 28-17.

The lead in the Machine Shop-Plexiglas game changed hands several times. The Plexiglas workers took the lead in the first period only to see it shattered by the time the half-time whistle blew. The machinists held on to their slight margin in the third period and then received their biggest scare when "Pete" DeLuca scored a trio of double-deckers in the final session which almost upset the boys of Anthony Castor.

"Reds" Gallagher's nine points gave him first place in the Machine Shop's scoring while DeLuca led the losers with his eight points.

The Main Office's playing was so unlike Tuesday night when they defeated the Crystalite team. But the office force gave the Plexigum team very little opposition, the gummers holding a 15-8 lead at half-time and increasing it as the game processed.

Loscul Rice with six field goals and a foul led his mates to victory while Tom Clark again was high man for the front office gang with 11 points, five field goals and a foul.

CAHALL LED SCORERS IN THE PLAYOFF SERIES OF BASKETBALL LEAGUE RECENTLY COMPLETED

Ralph Cahall, lanky forward of the championship Manhattan A. A. team of the Bristol Basketball League, added more honors after his name when the official averages showed that he led the scorers in the recently completed play-off series.

In the three-game series against Profy's, Cahall scored 39 points, one more than his team-mate, Joseph Snyder, and "Jobby" Dugan, of the Profy team, who were deadlocked with 38 points each. Joe Roe, who won scoring honors last season while competing for the Rohm & Haas team, took fourth place this year with 34 points.

Foul shooting honors for the series went to "Buck" Profy, who dropped in six out of eight tries. Cahall, who won the foul honors during the regular season, had seven out of 14.

Bensalem Groups Ready For Disasters

Joseph Kish, chairman of the Rescue Committee of Lower Bensalem Township Disaster Preparedness, announces that detachments of rescue and first aid have completed the required first aid training given by the American Red Cross and are now taking extensive training in rescue methods. Each member of these detachments has been furnished with the proper identification card and badge, as well as other necessary equipment.

The purpose of these Red Cross units is to co-operate and give aid where required, working with the local civilian defense authorities.

Each detachment is broken down into squads of five persons including the leader. The detachments each have an assigned first aid station to which they report when a disaster happens, and squads are posted in areas which are assigned to them.

Detachment leader for Andalusia is Miss E. May Early and her assistant leaders are Miss Hilda Leversidge and Andrew Keyser.

The leader in Cornwells is Mrs. Irene Hanson and assistant leader is Mrs. Helen Day.

Eddington's leader is Mrs. Ethel M. Courtwright and assistant leader is Mrs. Margaret Cole.

Each of these detachments need more members especially men to complete additional squads. Persons 18 years old or over are invited to join if they have completed the Standard and Advanced Training in First Aid given by the American Red Cross. Meetings are held at the respective first aid stations each week; Andalusia detachment meeting at the Boy Scout Cabin Sunday at 6.30 p. m.; Cornwells and Eddington in the Boy Scout hall of the Methodist Church in Cornwells at 7.30 p. m. Tuesday.

A standard course in first aid will be started in the Bensalem High School tomorrow night at 7.30 o'clock.

SOFT LIFE, SOFT TEETH

CINCINNATI, O.—(INS)—Our soft civilization is wrecking the nation's teeth, Dr. Charles A. Sweet, of Oakland, Calif., past president of the American Society of Dentistry for Children, asserted in Cincinnati recently. "Soft food plus soft living equals soft people with soft and decayed teeth," was the equation in which Dr. Sweet explained deteriorating teeth.

WELL NAMED

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(INS)—Navy recruiters lost a couple of "naturals" here—and to Leathernecks, at that.

Among recent recruits enlisted by Marines were Donald Bluejacket and Raymond Sailor.
